TODAY'S MUSIC ARRANGER

Ted McDaniel - joined the arranging staff of The Ohio State University Marching Band in 1981. He has a bachelor of arts degree from Morehouse College in Atlanta and a master's degree and PhD from the University of Iowa. He was a band director at Morehouse College and the head of the music department at North Carolina A&T in Greensboro before coming to The Ohio State University. He remains active as a jazz scholar, composer, performer, clinician and arranger. After 35 years, McDaniel retired from the Ohio State faculty in 2015; he served as professor of African American Music, a joint position in the School of Music and the Department of African American and African Studies. He was also director of the Jazz Ensemble and of Jazz Studies at Ohio State, and was a former chair of African American and African Studies.
